4) Student Academic Advising

On average, I have 22 student advisees per year. My regular advising activities include sending welcome letters to new and returning advisees, having routine meetings with advisees on a monthly basis discussing academic planning, study strategies, time management, and other questions and concerns, and writing recommendation letters for further education or job placement. Unofficial advising with advisees and other students occurs daily, including discussing writing projects, test preparation, major/minor selections, course selections, references on research, job interviews, and personal problems. I receive 10 to 20 e-mails from advisees and students daily and I always respond to them right away. My advising does not stop after the graduation of students as many students have kept touch with me reporting progress in life and asking for reference letters.
